

1. The first bar represents the initial state of the system, where the system is at rest and the energy is zero.

2. The second bar represents the state where the system has been excited to a higher energy level, and the energy is positive.

3. The third bar represents the state where the system has been excited to a higher energy level, and the energy is positive.

4. The fourth bar represents the state where the system has been excited to a higher energy level, and the energy is positive.